A NEW LOOK FOR VIRGINIA PENINSULA

The home of the Gators in 2022 officially became Virginia Peninsula Community College on July 1 when the College took its new name. The new name was publicly ushered in with a grand rebranding event at the Hampton campus.

The historic two-hour gathering on July 12 allowed students, faculty, and staff to join President Dr. Towuanna Porter Brannon in closing out and celebrating a nearly two-year name change process.

Members of the College and Educational Foundation boards along with special guests representing local and state government, business, industry, and other sectors were also on hand for the festivities.

The celebration placed emphasis on the College's mission, which has not changed. Virginia Peninsula remains dedicated to changing lives and transforming the community through diverse, inclusive, and equitable education and workforce training, excellent support and services, and innovative partnerships.

The College joins four others within Virginia's Community Colleges (VCCS) in being renamed:

- Dabney S. Lancaster is Mountain Gateway Community College
- John Tyler is Brightpoint Community College
- Lord Fairfax is Laurel Ridge Community College
- Patrick Henry is Patrick & Henry Community College

On the heels of its successful July 12 event, the College unveiled its new logo, tagline and official seal on November 7. The College selected its new brand with input from internal and external stakeholders.

Logo: The Bridge (Representing connection, support, access, progress, and stability)

Tagline: Our Mission: Your Success. (An assertive, modern, relatable, memorable statement)

Seal: Virginia map with overlaid Peninsula map (Representing the College's firm tie to its service areas)

Created by alumna Michelle Shonk, media manager at the College, this contemporary imagery is ideal as the Virginia Peninsula Community College collective looks ahead to new horizons and a bright future.

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

Thank you for supporting Virginia Peninsula Community College. Our mission is to change lives and transform communities. We live that mission every day by providing high-quality education and training to diverse student populations that align with the needs of local and regional industries.

We support our students' retention through various grants and wrap-around services that reduce barriers and threats to their program completion. Our leadership, faculty and staff are committed to lifelong learning, professional development, and the creation of a culture of excellence through continuous examination and programmatic improvements.

Virginia, like most states, is facing a workforce crisis. We are experiencing record-low unemployment and shrinking labor force participation rates. This has left hundreds of jobs vacant throughout the Virginia Peninsula. Given projected retirements over the next five years, our college is (and must continue) to be a vital partner to families and employers seeking social and economic growth and resilience.

With the continued support and generosity of our donors, sponsors, and local legislators, we will unwaveringly continue to remove tuition barriers, modernize our facilities, support the basic needs of students, increase access and retention, and expand dual enrollment at no cost to high school students' families.

On behalf of the Virginia Peninsula Community College students, administration, faculty, staff, Local College Board, and Foundation Board members, I am pleased to share our 2022 Annual Report.

With gratitude,

Dr. Towuanna Porter Brannon

COMMUNITY PARTNERSHIPS

RECONNECTING TO SOUTHEAST NEWPORT NEWS

The College has made significant efforts to re-establish presence in the Southeast Newport News region. The Southeast Higher Education Center (SEHEC) was established in fall 2007 at An Achievable Dream Middle and High School with the goal of increasing post-secondary access to the residents from our largest locality.

In 2022, through the generosity of the Educational Foundation, the College dedicated personnel to the SEHEC along with funding for outreach and community programming. In addition to expanding academic course offerings we are introducing short-term training to include phlebotomy and emergency medical services.

The College has sponsored career fairs in the southeast Newport News community leading to immediate job offers. We partnered with local school board members and a former school superintendent to introduce workforce training programs to hundreds of southeast Newport News residents.

In addition to these programs, we will also open a Center for Teacher Excellence. The College is in the early planning stages needed to establish a new skilled trades center in Southeast Newport News. The planned expansion would increase overall training capacity at VPCC for maritime and construction skilled trades while also providing a new accessible training location for the Southeast Newport News community.

“We are excited about the opportunity to increase educational access in one of our most underserved communities,” said President Towuanna Porter Brannon.

At its peak in 2010, the SEHEC served nearly 400 students. Over time, enrollment declined and during the 2020-2021 academic year, the College could not offer any courses due to the COVID-19 pandemic. Beginning in fall 2021, the College resumed offering courses. We established an internal task force as well as an advisory board of stakeholders representing the region. In March 2022, the College appointed an interim dean of Community Partnerships who could dedicate time and energy to the increased efforts at the Center and in the community.

Summer Camps Connected Youth to College

The College continued its tradition of providing summer camp experiences for service area youth. Camps in 2022 included a five-day graphic design camp, a summer academy on drones for disabled students through the Virginia Department for Aging and Rehabilitative Services in collaboration with the Virginia Space Grant Consortium; and an immersive five-week geology course for Hampton City Schools’ students. All totaled, camps served more than 50 participants.

STUDENT SUCCESS

Meet the 2022-2023 Presidential Ambassadors

Virginia Peninsula Community College is proud to make leadership development part of the student experience by accepting students in its Presidential Ambassadors program. The program allows four students to commit to 10 months of service participating in events and working in various roles on campus each academic year, according to Program Coordinator Michelle Manfred.

Students receive a $1,000 incentive and the program allows them to be mentored by College leaders. The 2022-2023 Presidential Ambassadors are:

Sharena Marsh serves at the Historic Triangle campus in Williamsburg and aspires to a career in the mental health field. After graduating from Lafayette High School in 2020, she chose the College to major in social science.

Of her academic and career goals over the next five years, Marsh said: “Academically, I hope to earn a master’s degree. I hope that I become the social worker/psychologist I’ve always wanted to be.”

In addition to serving as an ambassador, she established the College’s Gun Violence and Bullying Prevention Club.

Gabrielle Lawson serves at the Hampton campus. Lawson, a first-generation college student, enrolled in June 2020. Having graduated from Norfolk’s Norview High School 10 years prior, the social science major aims to become a mental health counselor or psychologist working with adolescents and young adults who battle mental illness.

As for the inspiration behind her pursuit of higher education, Lawson said: “I promised my parents that I would get my college degree, especially after the death of my father.”

A breast cancer survivor, she looks forward to reaching her academic and career goals which involve also working on a doctoral degree over the next five years.

When Kayla Greene enrolled at Virginia Peninsula Community College in February 2022, she discovered that the Presidential Ambassador program was an ideal opportunity. A graduate of Oklahoma’s Altus High School, Greene is a business administration major aiming for a career in marketing to ultimately become an entrepreneur.

Asked how experiences at VPCC have helped her work toward her goals, Greene said: “Virginia Peninsula has provided me with a lot of resources that will allow me to grow as an individual. This school has also introduced me to the workforce where I am currently obtaining my medical coding and billing license alongside my associate degree.”

Holloway Gubeli is an ambassador at the Historic Triangle campus having chosen Virginia Peninsula as a launch pad for her dream of becoming a medical doctor. The Grafton High School graduate enrolled at the College in the fall 2021 majoring in health science.

A member of the National Society of Leadership and Success as well, Gubeli has major life plans over the next five years.

“I hope to spend one more year at VPCC then two years at the University of Virginia for my bachelor’s in biology, then four at Virginia Tech for their doctor of osteopathic medicine program,” she emphasized.

ACE Academy Set Grad Off to a Great Start

Keith Ferguson earned an associate degree while in high school. Now 20, he is poised to receive a bachelor’s degree in film and media studies from the College of William & Mary.

Several opportune moments led to his success thus far. The first was enrollment in the Academy of the Advanced College Experience (ACE) at Phoebus High School. The dual enrollment program with Virginia Peninsula Community College enables students to earn an associate degree while simultaneously earning a high school diploma.

“I was put in the right place at the right time,” he said. “I’ve been put in a lot of great positions to do the things I love. Being (in) the first class of the ACE Academy was a benefit. It’s put me in a position I didn’t expect to be in so early. I’d be a little bit farther behind if I had not gone to VPCC.”

With a high school diploma and an associate degree in social science in hand, he headed to W&M in 2021.

Another “right place at the right time” situation happened in the summer of 2022. The college junior got an internship with WAVY-TV, the local NBC affiliate.

Assigned to the promotions department, he saw how things work behind the scenes and in front of the camera. He learned how to create commercials and accompanied anchors and field reporters on news stories.

Working on the “Hampton Roads Today” show reunited him with VPCC President Towuanna Porter Brannon. She was a guest and Ferguson was a crew member that day. She remembered meeting him in 2021 during his ACE graduation at the Peninsula Workforce Development Center.

Upon finishing at W&M, Ferguson plans to pursue acting, writing, producing, and directing. He said those interests stem from his family. His sister is an author, and he has two uncles who are entertainers – one acts, the other is a musician.

“I love being on stage. I love talking to people. I love doing different things. I just love entertainment,” Ferguson enthused.

He appreciates ACE Academy through Phoebus High School and Virginia Peninsula Community College for providing a solid foundation.

VOLLEYBALL PLAYER ELATED ABOUT COLLEGE'S FIRST TEAM

Hannah Sweazey of Yorktown has been a force on the Virginia Peninsula Community College women's volleyball team having played all positions on the squad since its October 2022 debut.

A social science major and Tabb High School graduate who also attended the American Overseas School of Rome, Sweazey did not initially have VPCC on her radar. However, the student-athlete experience made her glad about her decision to enroll in August 2022.

"... I see that it was really a blessing in disguise because I got to meet and play with a great team. Honestly, Virginia Peninsula women's volleyball has made time here so much fun," she enthused.

"I'm absolutely honored to be part of the first Lady Gator team and we laugh, grow, and play together. Thank you, guys from the bottom of my heart for everything each of you have given me. Once a Gator, always a Gator!"

The volleyball team competed as a club team in 2022 and is slated to join the National Junior College Athletic Association in 2023.

Gators Win Conference Title

In discussing the successful 2021-2022 season for men's basketball, head coach Chris Moore didn't mention a single player. Moore, who is also director of Athletics at Virginia Peninsula Community College, certainly could have.

Javion Majette was the conference player of the year. His twin brother, Jaquan, scored 33 points in the New South Athletic Conference championship game victory and was a first-team all-conference selection. Juwuan Brown was another first-team selection, and Kaiden Mines was named to the second team.

They were pivotal as the Gators went 16-1 overall and won their first conference title since 2015 playing home games at Hampton's Bethel High School. The Gators defeated Carolina Christian College 96-79 for the conference title.

Moore attributes success to players understanding the importance of selflessness, resiliency, perseverance, hard work and teamwork.

College Expanding Athletics Program

In spring 2022, the College announced plans to expand athletics by adding six sports in a three-year span. The additions will bring the number of VPCC sports to nine when the 2024-2025 academic year begins.

Virginia Peninsula Community College is adding men's soccer and men's and women's cross country/track and field for the 2023-2024 school year.

Athletics Director Chris Moore said the additions makes sense.

"Soccer is a popular sport in our area," he said. "I know that we have a lot of young men who want to play soccer collegiately, and I think our program fills a need in our community."

With cross country/track and field, which the College counts as one sports team to reach its goal of nine, different types of athletes can be targeted, said Moore.

"I think from a retention standpoint, it gives us an opportunity to help some of the students who might not be able to shoot a basketball, to kick a soccer ball, or hit a baseball, to get out there and run," he said.

Moore also announced that all VPCC sports teams will be members of the National Junior College Athletic Association beginning in the fall. Women's volleyball participated as a club team in fall 2022, and the softball team is doing the same this spring.

"Being under the NJCAA, of course it's directly correlated with the NCAA, so it does give them a sense of pride," Moore said. "It helps with bringing in those higher tier athletes. Being able to compete and play on a national stage gives us something more to play for."

The College has sponsored baseball and men's and women's basketball for several years and added softball and women's volleyball for the 2022-2023 academic year. The College also will add two more teams for the 2024-2025 school year, but a decision about which sports is pending. Moore said he's considering men's volleyball, women's soccer, tennis and golf.

WORKFORCE DEVELOPMENT

NEW SKILLED TRADES CENTER OPEN IN TOANO

More than 18 months after being awarded a grant for nearly $1.7 million, Virginia Peninsula Community College opened its second skilled trades center.

Located off Route 60 in upper James City County, the center is in Toano at 236 Industrial Blvd. It is owned by builder David Johnson, who is handling the renovations. The site offers 7,800 square feet of training space, according to Todd Estes, the College's vice president of Workforce Development & Innovation. Four programs will be offered there: welding, CNC machining, carpentry and masonry.

The site's February 2023 opening is two years after the College received funding from the United States Department of Labor's Strengthening Community College training grants program. The funds had to be used for skilled workforce programs.

While most of the grant supports the Toano facility, the rest of the College also benefits.

"There's also work being done here on the main campus through this grant," Estes said. "CNC machining on the Hampton campus, along with HVAC, were two programs that received direct support out of this grant."

Estes said it's an exciting time for Workforce Development at VPCC.

"James City County represents a significant expansion of our skilled trades footprint at the upper end of our service area," he said.

New Early Childhood Education and Development Center

Virginia Peninsula Community College leaders along with officials from the City of Newport News and Peake Childhood Center gathered at the site of a new childhood development center for the official groundbreaking in late October 2022. The facility will house an Early Childhood Education Center, the College's Early Child Education courses, and a VPCC Center for Teacher Excellence where the College will train current teachers and childcare providers on new state regulations and best practices in childhood development.

College Makes 2022 Best for Vets List

Virginia Peninsula Community College is proud to serve the active and retired military community in Hampton Roads. The Veteran Services team is dedicated to helping military-affiliated students achieve their aspirations in higher education be that earning a degree, certificate, or completing training for a new career.

That commitment gained recognition from Military Times which included the College in its 2022 “Best for Vets” rankings. Virginia Peninsula ranked 18th in the Appalachian region for public two-year institutions. This is the second consecutive year VPCC was recognized.

The Times combines public data from the Department of Education and Department of Veterans Affairs with a survey that is sent to each institution. The survey asks about the graduation rate of veterans, how many veterans each college serves, how many are active duty, tuition rates, facilities, as well as other services or opportunities offered other than VA benefits.

In the academic year 2021-2022, military-affiliated students (e.g. active duty, veteran, spouse or military dependent) represented 25.3% of the College’s 8,987 credit students.

STEM Program for Minorities Included Marine Research

As part of the Virginia-North Carolina Louis Stokes Alliance for Minority Participation (LSAMP) program, nine VPCC students conducted hands-on field and lab science research at the Eastern Shore Lab of Virginia Institute of Marine Science, William & Mary in Wachapreague, Va.

The LSAMP program is a National Science Foundation-funded initiative focused on increasing the number of minority students earning degrees in STEM fields.

During the April 15-16 visit, students resided at the Marine Science campus, spent time on barrier islands collecting marine organisms from multiple habitats, observed and examined live organisms, and interacted with scientists working at the lab. Also participating were VPCC project directors Jean Frank and Dr. Jennifer Martin (both professors in the College’s Science, Technology, Engineering and Math division) as well as Dr. Kerry Ragno, vice president for Academic Affairs.

ENROLLMENT HIGHLIGHTS

VPCC At-a-Glance Annual Enrollment

In academic year 2021-2022 Virginia Peninsula Community College served 8,987 students (unduplicated headcount) in credit instruction, making it the sixth largest college within the Virginia Community College System in terms of headcount.

The College serves a highly diverse region, and its student body closely reflects the demographics of the greater community. Of the College's 8,987 credit students, 60.1% are female, 31.9% are 25 years old or older, and 53.6% are minority in terms of race/ethnicity.

Virginia Peninsula Community College serves a region that is home to many military service members and their families. In academic year 2021-2022, 25.3% of Virginia Peninsula credit students indicated a military affiliation (e.g., active-duty, veteran, military spouse, or military dependent).

STRATEGIC ENROLLMENT GROWTH

'THE SHOP' AIMS TO BOOST MINORITY MALE COLLEGE SUCCESS

As part of efforts to boost the retention and graduation rates of minority men and improve their student experience, Virginia Peninsula Community College launched The Shop in 2022.

Focusing on the values of scholarship, brotherhood, development, and service, The Shop emphasizes its vision is to be the premiere support and developmental resource for its participants.

“At the College, young minority men are looking for a space for opportunities, exposure, and engagement,” said Coordinator Antonio Dill-Word. “The Shop developed a plan that will create, combine, and strengthen minority male communities with the intent of enhancing their overall student experience.”

Program goals are:

- Increase program participants' retention rate by 60%
- Research and address barriers that affect the pursuit and completion of education at VPCC
- Develop a network that will support and mentor members through graduation and beyond
- Provide educational sessions and activities to promote life skills such as budgeting, wellness, relationship building and cultural appreciation

The organization will incorporate personal and cultural enrichment with a visit to the African American History Museum in Washington, D.C., monthly community and team building exercises, and biweekly skills training.

“This plan of engagement will not only increase the strength of the students at our institution but empower them to discover success beyond it. The Shop is necessary as a tool for the Hampton Roads community. As our young men grow and find success, it will inspire others who look like, talk like, and come from similar backgrounds to do the same,” explained Dill-Word, who is also a VPCC presidential fellow.

“This program,” he added, “will help make Virginia Peninsula Community College the change agent it was designed to be.”

Coaching for the organization will come from Program Advisor Dr. Valerie Burge-Hall, the College’s executive leadership, and a five-member advisory board representing administrators, faculty, and staff throughout the College. Board members are Kadisia Archer, Lloyd Carter, Chris Moore, Damond Pope, and Christopher Wallace.

Dual Enrollment

DE Students by School Division

Academic Year 2021-2022 Dual Enrollment Students
(Headcount)

Hampton City Schools	408
Newport News Public Schools	244
Poquoson Public Schools	113
Williamsburg-James City County Public Schools	286
York County Public Schools	156
Total (Regional Public High Schools)	1,207

As shown in the table, the overall total for the public high schools in the VPCC service region was 1,207 students. An additional 660 students were either from a private school or from a public high school outside the College's service region bringing the total to 1,867. Out-of-region dual enrollment students come to the College in two primary ways – (1) through specialized summer programs we offer in partnership with NASA and (2) through the regional Governor's School, which also services students from some school divisions just outside of the VPCC service region.

In academic year 2021-2022, 1,867 high school students attended the College as part of dual enrollment programs and partnerships. They represented 21% of the College's total academic credit students for the year.

Return to In-Person Instruction

In the 2021-2022 academic year, Virginia Peninsula Community College served 8,987 students in credit instruction. Of those, 3,907 (43.5%) enrolled in at least one in-person class. This marked a substantial return to in-person instruction following the COVID-19 pandemic, as only 2,719 students (28.2%) had enrolled in at least one in-person class the previous academic year. The academic schedule for the upcoming year, beginning with fall 2022, was even further adjusted to provide more opportunities for in-person learning.

Care Team and Food Pantry Offer Vital Service

In the first eight months of the year, the Virginia Peninsula Community College food pantries distributed more than 19,000 pounds of food to more than 3,200 people.

An initiative of the College’s Care Team, the pantries do more than provide food to those in need, said Doreen Dougherty of Student Services at the Hampton campus.

Through a pair of grants from Anthem Blue Cross and Blue Shield, the College has distributed $6,312 in laundry detergent, cleaning supplies, wipes, paper towels, and more to students.

“All that stuff has been needed by a lot of students,” said Dougherty, who has taken charge of the Care Team upon the departure of Richard Hurst, former Disability Support Services coordinator.

Another $2,000 was used to purchase Walmart gift cards for students, who had a particular financial need.

“We had a lot of students who needed baby formula when we had the baby formula shortage,” she cited as an example.

Dougherty and Shante Bell of the Institutional Advancement division are the primary contacts at the Hampton campus. At the Historic Triangle campus, the food pantry is accessible through the Student Services office in Suite 117.

The pantries are open 8 a.m. – 5 p.m. Monday through Friday at both campuses.

The College purchases most of its food from the Virginia Peninsula Foodbank through donations, which can be made via the College’s Educational Foundation or by using AmazonSmile. In addition, small private food contributions also are accepted.

While donations are a major help, Doherty said the food pantries also need volunteers.

College's Inaugural 5K, a Victory for Former VPCC Educator

When the College presented its inaugural Community Day 5K perhaps nobody embodied the spirit of the event more than former adjunct psychology professor George Fenigsohn. Despite being the last one to complete the trip around the Matteson Trail at The Hamptons Golf Course, he was simply happy to finish.

"The reason I went to the race was just to be there," said Fenigsohn. "Nobody cared if I won or how fast I went."

Loud applause erupted when he appeared at the finish line after more than an hour on the trail. He inspired the entire field of nearly 80 participants who represented six age groups.

Fenigsohn, who celebrated his 75th birthday a week after the Oct. 8 event, said he was in perfect shape throughout 2021. He was a counselor at a private practice and a competitive race walker. However, on Oct. 24, 2021, he hit his head on his boat, which he was refurbishing and planning to paint. Four days later, he suffered a severe stroke.

He has traveled a difficult road in the past year. He was in various hospitals and rehab centers for months. He also suffered a heart attack and nearly died. He moved from Poquoson to Virginia Beach for therapy, then back to Poquoson.

For Fenigsohn, participating in the 5K was vital because his long-term prognosis is unpredictable.

"I made it a point to be out in the public," he said. "It was very emotional."

The stroke has affected his balance, vision, and his right side. Pain is also constant.

When he lined up at the starting point, he had Nordic poles (similar to ski poles) with him for balance. In the last few hundred yards, he had to rely on rollator. It resembles a walker with wheels. He tries to do a 20- or 30-minute walk every day.

Despite his struggles, particularly depression, he is grateful. He understands things could have been worse. "There are people who are paralyzed, who have lost their speech," he said, noting his doctors and therapists say he is making progress.

Still, it's a struggle, especially when he considers his former life. He has a doctoral degree in counseling from William & Mary, was a Fulbright Scholar, and was in the Peace Corps.

"I've had an accomplished life, but this?" he said. "All of a sudden, in a moment, you're just a child. There's nothing to train you on how to cope with this."

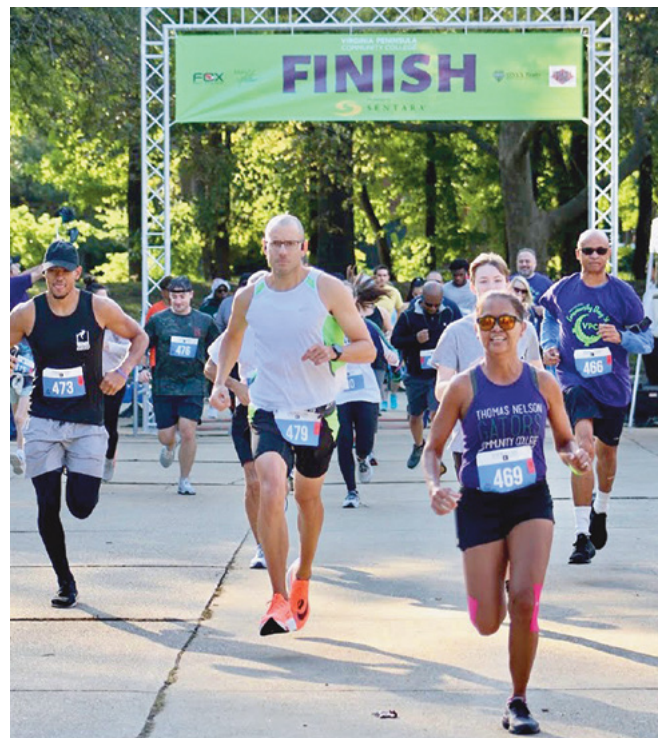

One thing he doesn't want to be is a victim, which is why he participates in these events and looks forward to his therapy.

"I don't want it to be said that I was slacking," said Fenigsohn.

Anyone who saw him at the Community Day 5K knows that is far from the case.

He was a true champion during the event at which 32 volunteers served and nearly 10 vendors and sponsors were featured.

Special guests also turned out. Congressman Bobby Scott and Sentara Williamsburg President Amber Price addressed the crowd during warm-ups stressing how vital Virginia Peninsula Community College is to region's growth as the Commonwealth moves into the future. After the encouraging remarks, Hampton Mayor Donnie Tuck's enthusiastic countdown and an official horn sounding started runners and walkers on their way.

LOOKING AHEAD

Enrollment Management and Student Success

During 2022 significant turnover occurred within the Enrollment Management and Student Services Division. This provided an ideal opportunity to redesign the division in a manner that best serves students at both campuses and off-site locations.

The generosity of our Educational Foundation allowed the College to hire an athletic director, an interim dean for Community Partnerships, a Minority Male Success coordinator, and fellow to coordinate outreach, recruitment, and enrollment efforts.

The College welcomed a new registrar and dean of Enrollment Management in 2022 and will hire a dean for Retention and Student Success in 2023. Our city managers and county administrators generously allocated financial resources that the College will use to hire navigators. A new system-wide position, navigators serve as potential students' point of contact from the moment of interest through first semester registration.

The division is focused on making Peninsula families aware of various programs available at the College. While ensuring our students experience a culture of caring with every interaction they have while enrolled.

Workforce Development

The Virginia Peninsula, like many other areas throughout the nation, faced critical labor shortages and talent skill gaps in 2022. The leadership and staff of VPCC's Workforce Development unit were heavily relied upon by our K-12 and industry partners to flood talent pipelines with highly trained individuals who can fill several hundreds of the area's job vacancies. The College is a founding member of the Community College Workforce Cooperative that leverages the resources and ingenuity of the three regional community colleges when responding to significant business and industry needs.

Our Workforce Development unit experienced a banner year in 2022. We welcomed new Vice President Todd Estes, an Apprentice School graduate who has led workforce initiatives at the system level and at sister community colleges.

Enrollment in short-term, high-demand skilled trades, health, and information technology courses rose 33%. In 2022 the College was awarded over $5 million to support workforce development training and expansion needs. We partner heavily with the Hampton Roads Workforce Council and the region's largest employers to satisfy labor needs. We also partner with small businesses and high schools to ensure that all labor needs are being addressed and area high school students have diverse post-secondary education options.

Finally, Workforce Development is expanding its training footprint with the addition of programs offered in James City County and the City of Newport News. As employer needs grow, Peninsula residents can count on VPCC to train them for jobs that lead to family-sustaining wages and lifelong careers.

Academic Affairs

The Academic Affairs division experienced significant leadership turnover in the past year and is now building capacity to elevate our level of service to students. For example, recruitment will soon begin for key leadership positions that will directly support faculty and staff in delivering innovative, high-quality instruction to students. The Nursing and Emergency Medical Services programs completed successful accreditation site visits in fall 2022.

The department was awarded $52,000 from the Online Virginia Network in fall 2022 to create a comprehensive program, including learning modules, for faculty to evaluate and increase the quality of online teaching over the next two years. In addition, departmental leaders have begun collaborative meetings with our partners in Enrollment Management and Student Success to smooth internal processes which directly affect student retention and success. These collaborations will ensure that student needs are effectively addressed. Another high priority is dual enrollment partnerships. The Academic Affairs team is deeply engaged in reviewing and revising processes and procedures for recruitment and enrollment of our dual enrollment high school students. These processes will align with the National Alliance of Concurrent Enrollment Partnerships standards for quality programming. Finally, we will continue focusing on ensuring that VPCC's curriculum is current, relevant, and meets changing community needs. In 2022, our continuous evaluation and improvement review led to the elimination of 20 academic programs and specializations that were historically under enrolled or had no completion rates. The coming year will include a transition of several transfer degree programs to align with statewide curricula as part of the Transfer Virginia initiative. As a result, students will take courses and complete associate degrees that are standard across the 23 Virginia community colleges. The degree plans mirror the first two years of Virginia's public four-year institutions, easing students' transition and time to completion at their selected universities.

Nearly $7,000 Donated to Dance Team

Dr. Towuanna Porter Brannon’s support for Virginia Peninsula Community College’s award-winning ballroom dance team comes through in her words and deeds.

After the team kicked off All College Day activities with a performance in mid-August, she encouraged faculty and staff to make financial donations to the team and announced she would match the total by the end of the day.

When the team wrapped up its first practice of the fall season on Sept. 12, Brannon was front and center presenting a $6,855 check to adviser Pam Roberts and the team.

“I believe in healthy competition, and I figured if the president said she was going to match the offer, then it would inspire people to give more,” Brannon said after the presentation.

Not only was she surprised at the amount raised, but also how generous people were.

“There are people who gave hundreds of dollars,” she said. “That was pretty impressive.”

Roberts helped students start the team in 2016. And receiving this kind of support is meaningful.

“We’ve really been out there for the College, trying to promote the College, and they were very overwhelmed and ecstatic that they have backing from the top,” Roberts said.

She said the team represented the College in more than 70 appearances in the year before the pandemic.

Although funding comes from Student Activities, students pay for some of their equipment because costs can run $3,000 for one competition. The team usually competes four times a year, two each semester.

Brannon said this faculty and staff contribution illustrates how much support the team has on campus while also showing that the College community is interested and invested in this talented group.

Roberts said team members are proud of their role in enhancing the College’s image and reputation.

Scholarship Recipients Show Appreciation to Donors

For the first time in three years, the Educational Foundation’s annual scholarship luncheon allowed recipients to mingle with donors who made it all possible. The more than 40 people on hand March 21 heard firsthand from those students how appreciative they were.

Six students whose programs of study range from engineering to medicine, spoke about their varied backgrounds and journeys. They were traditional and non-traditional students. They did have one thing in common: appreciation for those who have helped make it possible.

“I’m experiencing a lot of things I could never dream of,” said Milton Zacarias, a recipient of the Claude Moore Scholarship. “You do make a difference. Thank you for the support you gave us. This is what you have accomplished through your foundation.”

Priya Patel was awarded the Gayle K. Blankenship Memorial Scholarship. She discovered an interest in science while attending VPCC.

“Not only was I able to focus on my classes, but I was able to do something different,” she said. “This scholarship was amazing, and I’m very grateful for it.”
